

Robert Alatorre
December 03, 2019

AMM 2600 - Textile Fabrications

Reflection

This course goes beyond the scope of textile fibers and introduces extensive studies behind yarn and fabric structures as they apply to the apparel industry. The course material was extremely comprehensive and emphasized on disciplining students on how to visually and scientifically identify the distinct characteristics of various yarn and fabric structures. We then applied our studies to evaluate which textiles are appropriate to different end-uses by considering the textile's properties such as performance, cost, and quality. Through this course, I have developed a profound understanding and appreciation of textiles. It has provided me with a strong foundation to advance my interest and understanding of more advanced textile discussions.